

ABSTRACT

The conference "Authenticity in European cities; Creating, visualizing and contesting urban and built heritage" focuses on how buildings, neighbourhoods, urban spaces and actors are perceived as "authentic". What makes a city "unique", "characteristic", and "urban"? How have these images of urbanity changed over time?

Debates about the image, identity and memory of cities have become increasingly intense since the 1970s as a result of important transformations in the economic, political, socio-cultural and ecological spheres. In Germany and Eastern Central Europe, the political changes in 1989/90 also influenced how cities were perceived. Notions of historical and urban authenticity have powerfully promoted urban heritage debates.

The attribution of historical authenticity and discourse about urban authenticities are part of the production of urban space and its conceived, perceived, and lived dimensions. The conference will discuss how buildings, objects, discourses and practices in urban spaces represent a city's multiple pasts, creating multiple identities and possibilities of belonging.

The conference is part of the research project "Urban Authenticity. Creating, visualizing, and contesting built heritage in European cities since the 1970s" funded by the Leibniz Association. It is a collaboration between the Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space, the Institute for Contemporary History Munich-Berlin, the Herder Institute for Historical Research on East Central Europe, the Leibniz Centre for Contemporary History Potsdam, and the Association of Museums in Brandenburg.

WELCOME

The Leibniz Centre for Contemporary History Potsdam (ZZF) is a research institute focusing on 20th-century German and European history and its impact on the present.

The academic work of the institute is divided into four departments (Communism and Society, Economic Thought and Practice, Contemporary History of Media and Information Societies, Regimes of the Social Sphere). The ZZF is also responsible for the Leibniz Research Alliance "Value of the Past".

The ZZF collaborates with numerous universities and other research institutes in Germany and abroad. The institute has an international visiting scholar programme and offers infrastructure for researchers, as well as knowledge transfer.
